PAUL TERRY-TOONS

"IRISH STEW"

By Frank Moser and Paul Terry

Produced by Audio-Cinema, Inc.

"Irish Stew" is as chock-full of laughs as the average two-reel comedy; has as much action as a rodeo. New gags with plenty of punch, a new story with lots of pep!

To set the pace for this Hibernian dish, a quartette of cops do the jig that made Ireland famous. Getting into the spirit of things, a flock of dogs do the Irish reel, and so contagious is the music, that the tables, armchairs, crib and stove—even the clock—fall in. The clock, during its series of gyrations, produces a run of mice, and oh, how they run!

Enter the love interest, with a male and female mouse, more interested in each other than the scenery, riding off in their mule-drawn cart. They run into a tree, which unfortunately is the one where the spider, working with his friend, the eagle, has woven his web. The spider, suspended from the eagle's beak, swoops down and heaves the girl into the knot hole. Her escort climbs up after her, but she has been bundled off by the eagle to the castle on the hill.

He follows her into the haunted castle, where skeletons dance, and after killing her captor, rushes to the assistance of the girl. The minister is the next stop and, according to the customs of mice-land, their tails are tied in a love-knot.
